Synopsis

When brought to Athens, Greece in 2016 for a screening of his film DADDY, filmmaker Gerald McCullough unexpectedly meets a group of LGBT refugees fleeing persecution from their communities, their governments and their own families who now find themselves trapped in Greece. Confounded by their circumstances, he is compelled to document his education of a crisis facing countless members of his community who came to Greece under desperately different circumstances.

Gerald McCullough is an award winning filmmaker and actor best known for his 10 seasons as “Bobby Dawson” on the hit TV show “CSI” and for his critically lauded performances as "Roger" in the BearCity film franchise (“sexy and assured” NY Times). He currently guest stars in the new seasons of "Physical" on Apple + and "Messiah" with Michelle Monaghan on Netflix and was honored by OUT magazine as one of the year's most compelling people.

Gerald’s award winning directorial debut feature film, "Daddy", was listed by QUEERTY as one of the top 10 films currently streaming alongside "Milk" and "Dallas Buyers Club". His follow up documentary feature, "All Male, All Nude", was listed by PARADE MAGAZINE as 1 of the 25 steamiest films streaming on Amazon Prime and spawned a follow up documentary. The follow up film was also named in a QUEERTY Top 10. His filmmaking has received multiple awards beginning with his highly praised short film "The Moment After”.
